Questions for the treatment team

In addition to anything unique to your loved one's situation, consider asking the following questions:

- Is the patient currently on a psychiatric hold, or are they being evaluated for a hold? If they are on a hold, for how long, and when will it be reviewed?
- Do they have a diagnosis, and if so, could you explain it?
    - What are the main symptoms that point to that diagnosis?
- What is the prognosis?
- What is the treatment plan?
- What medications are they starting or stopping?
    - What is the dosage, expected response, and the potential side effects?
- When can I call or meet with the treatment team again?
- What is the best contact name and phone number for the treatment team?
- What is the aftercare plan?
    - What level of care is appropriate?
    - Have any referrals or appointments been made?
    - What should we do if symptoms worsen again?
- What information from family (or others) would be helpful to the treatment team?
